FUN Technologies Signs Dual Casual Games Agreements with German T-Com

Exclusive Private-Label and Advertising Agreements Further Extend FUN's Reach into Europe

TORONTO, September 6, 2006 – FUN Technologies Inc. ("FUN" or the "Company"), one of the world's leading online and interactive casual games providers, announced today that its wholly owned subsidiary, SkillJam EU Limited ("SkillJam"), has signed a pair of exclusive agreements with T-Com, the strategic business segment for broadband/fixline communications of Deutsche Telekom AG, to deliver its casual games platform to T-Online Internet Service Provider users. Through the first agreement, SkillJam will develop, operate and support a private-label online games platform for T-Online. Additionally, SkillJam has entered into an advertising agreement with InteractiveMedia CCSP GmbH, a wholly owned subsidiary of Deutsche Telekom, to promote SkillJam's skill games site within T-Online.de Web sites.

Under the terms of the exclusive, two-year online games partnership, SkillJam will create a German-language casual games platform, which accepts Euros, for T-Online's onSpiele games portal (<http://www.onspiele.de/>). The platform will include free games as well as subscription-based skill games, in which players compete for tokens that are redeemable for cash and merchandise prizes. T-Online.de is one of the largest portals in Germany, reaching 14 million unique visitors per month (AGOF, July 2006).

Furthermore, through an exclusive online advertising partnership, T-Com will promote SkillJam's German-language skill-based games site via the T-Online.de Web sites. Several million consumers visiting T-Online's Web sites, including onSpiele, Gamesload and onUnterhaltung, will be able to easily access SkillJam's www.skilljamspiele.de site for an opportunity to compete in skill games tournaments for cash and prizes.

“Our partnership with T-Com combines the extensive reach of the T-Online portal with FUN’s superior skill games technology to create the best online games platform for German customers,” said Lorne Abony, CEO of FUN Technologies. “Currently, our games are available in 8 languages and accept multiple currencies. Combining forces with Germany’s largest portal is an exciting development in our continued expansion into Europe.”

“Offering a variety of games and game options is a key component of our business strategy,” said Moritz Roth, senior manager, T-Online Entertainment and Portals. “Partnering with one of the leading casual games providers in the world allows us to deliver an expanded variety of games our customers can enjoy for free, or compete in tournaments for cash and prizes.”
